■ We don't know whether John O'Toole was being brave or just giving us some blarney with a suggestion he made recently. Instead of interrupting movies so often for short commercial breaks, he proposed that the networks gang the commercials together and show them during a few long breaks.

With fewer interruptions, viewers might have some better idea of what the movie is about. But, said Mr. O'Toole, besides making viewers happier, ganging would also improve the quality of commercials. His thesis is that the good commercials would stand out in this ganging system and the bad ones would be shown up as banal and ineffective and eventually would be taken off the air.

■ This sort of thinking might be expected from television critics or even from the broadcasters' TV Code Board, which has advocated fewer and longer commercial breaks. Mr. O'Toole is neither a critic nor a broadcaster. He is president of one of the Nation's largest advertising agencies—Foote, Cone & Belding. Now, advertisers do not like to have their commercials surrounded by lots of other commercials. They like to have them stand alone—or as nearly alone as possible. Was Mr. O'Toole deliberately opposing his own clients when he voiced his theory? If so, he is a brave man indeed.

Or was Mr. O'Toole confident that the networks would never flout the wishes of advertisers by ganging commercials anyway, so he might as well make some points by implying that his agency's commercials were so strong that he wouldn't be afraid to gang them with other agencies' weak ones.

■ We don't really care whether it was bravery or blarney. We like Mr. O'Toole's suggestion.

They bring them back alive and gabby

How that rare species, the Ideal Guest, is stalked from
The Bronx to Hollywood

By Judith Jobin

Every day hundreds of people—celebrities and average Joes—allow themselves to be propped on couches, hidden behind huge screens and incarcerated in soundproof booths as guests on TV's several-dozen panel, game, quiz and talk shows.

These programs consume a large portion of air time (about 30 hours daily in New York City) and an even larger chunk of humanity. The Tonight show alone requires a minimum of 30 guests a week.

Do you wonder where all of these people come from—and how they get on your screen? It is the doing of a little-known and harried corps of rather intense, even desperate, people. In the trade they're popularly called head-hunters, and to them falls the task of populating the Tonight show and all the rest with an unending stream of interesting, entertaining people—they hope.

Head-hunters are officially known as talent co-ordinators to the upper echelons of TV—a charitable term, considering that there is seldom much → talent available. For some programs, the head-hunter is the producer or his assistant. Sometimes the entire production staff is involved, as on the Today show, where anyone who thinks of a potential victim drops his name into a suggestion box.

The object of the hunt is not just any warm body. Head-hunters want people who can at least put together a few English sentences—a critical requirement. If a guest can venture a couple of opinions, crack some jokes, all the better—and rarer.

Some programs have additional requirements. Game-show guests must be able to play the games (believe it or not, the intricacies of PDQ and The Hollywood Squares are hopelessly beyond many guests, including a number of charming celebrities). The appropriate marital status is a must for The Newlywed Game and The Dating Game. (Head-hunters seeking single celebrities for Dating Game have become so harried, co-producer Larry Gottlieb admits, that "We watch for the divorce announcements. It's morbid, but we just have to know.") When Helen Gurley Brown was holding forth on Outrageous Opinions, head-hunter Ellen Krass had to find guests who actually had some.

The hunting-ground stretches from The Bronx to Hollywood, making all stops in between. Says Girl Talk producer Monty Morgan, "You find people all over. Friends call; and I read every magazine from Parents to Playboy. Here's an example," he cries, grabbing a sports magazine with a triumphant flourish. "I found a lady in here who's a fight promoter! Isn't that marvelous?"

Producer Al Morgan reported, before he left Today, "I normally read 13 or 14 books a week, and during the winter I go to the theater four nights a week. We never have an author or an actor unless someone has read the book or seen the show and thinks it's worth-while."

But plenty of head-hunters would consider Morgan's rigorous schedule absolutely glamorous compared to the outright indignities they often suffer. A girl named Hope Berg has been used to spending a good part of her week out on the street—stalking potential game-show contestants as if they were fugitives. Miss Berg has noted that the people she approached were "usually complimented," although she occasionally found herself in sticky situations. She was once ejected from a department store for diverting shoppers' attention from the idea of buying things to the much more attractive concept of winning them free on television.

Because their product is people, head-hunters often have to be amateur psychologists as well as sleuths. When Bill Saluga was trying to round up guests for Steve Allen's show, he placed newspaper ads requesting that "all authentic kooks" give him a call. Saluga got nowhere until he realized that "kooks don't think they're kooks." After changing the ads from "kooks" to "special talents," he said, "Then I got 'em all."

Thinking back, Saluga remembers some memorably off-beat guests . . . "the lady who writes frontward and backward (with both hands!), another lady who makes jewelry out of kidney beans, and the fellow who was selling physical-fitness equipment he claimed would put muscles on anybody. But he was 6 feet tall and only weighed about 140 pounds. He was the picture of a weakling, but he said that before he used the equipment he was even skinnier!"

The trouble with "special talents" is that most of them don't need newspaper ads for encouragement. Firm in the belief that they have something to offer, they offer it over and over again.

"They're breaking down the doors," rasps Monty Morgan, glancing apprehensively in all directions. Rudy Tellez, producer and former head-hunter for Tonight, pales at the thought. "One day we got this guy who stands on his head and sings opera—opera! Another time we had this 101-year-old lady come in. I took one look and hollered 'No!' I didn't think she'd make it through the show—but we put her on and she was great."

Dating Game, with its lure of instant romance, holds the record for volunteers: 800 hopefuls every week. Only 48 get on the program, and it is no simple task to pick the right 48.

The weeding-out process for Dating Game and other programs involves an interview and/or audition, executed tactfully and culminating, most of the time, with a gentle "I'll call you if . . ." One of the types interviewers must spot is the deadhead—he's the one who gets on-camera and turns to stone before your very eyes. Tellez says that, during the interview, a dead-head will act as follows: "The fellow sticks his hands in his pockets, marches rapidly around the office, arches his eyebrows and says, all in one breath, 'Niceofficeyougothere - heh - heh - heh-don'treallyknowwhy!mhere - heh - heh - heh-nothingspecialaboutme.' He has obviously forgotten that he has written 17 letters describing his abilities, has called three times a day, and came in this morning prepared to fight his way through the entire NBC security force. Ninety percent of the time, we spot types like him."

The ominous 10 percent left over accounts for the heads that are in good working order during interviews and auditions—but suffer mysterious breakdowns only when faced with lights, cameras and—heavens!—Johnny Carson. One of the worst, Tellez recalls, was a famous former Presidential chef. "He froze! Every time Johnny asked him a question he'd say 'Ah, well, yes . . . I'm glad you asked me that. . . .' But that was as far as he got. He never answered anything." Monty Morgan says that Girl Talk's all-time dead-head was a young starlet who did absolutely nothing for a half-hour except demolish an entire pack of cigarettes, enveloping herself in a silent shroud of smoke.

Al Morgan still remembers the guest who was supposed to be a real African head-hunter. "They swore he spoke English," Morgan says, "but he didn't. In fact, he didn't speak anything but bird calls."

After getting a guest signed and sealed, the head-hunter's next hurdle is getting him delivered.

Mary Markham, who's been in the business for 19 years, has donated the clothes off her back to get a forgetful star on the air. (Hedy Lamarr got a slip, Zsa Zsa Gabor a bra.)

Once she lost an Academy Award-winning star to an 8 A.M. drinking spree. There are lots of ways to lose guests. "Flu epidemics, missed airplanes, cab strikes," recites Rudy Tellez. "The Maharishi may decide to meditate an extra half-hour! We need a complete backlog of people we can throw in at the last moment—that's why you see so many faces over and over."

On the other hand, one of Al Morgan's worst moments came about because a king showed up when—and where—he shouldn't have. "We had no Downs and no studio—with a king coming in 10 minutes," he says. The king was Hussein of Jordan and the Downs was Hugh—who was at the UN, where Hussein had agreed to be interviewed. The king, however, hied himself over to NBC at the last minute for a surprise visit. He wanted, he said with a smile, to see an American TV studio.

Which is precisely the problem. Everyone wants to see an American TV studio. From the stage, of course; from stage-center if at all possible. And after all, the airways do belong to the people.

Right, Rudy? Mary? Monty?

A TV STATION BLOOMS IN THE DESERT

The Contes and Don Wilson at poolside.

Early in 1968, Mr. and Mrs. John Conte and Hilton Hotels bought El Mirador hotel in Palm Springs, Cal. The Contes also acquired a TV station—KMIR-TV. Do they rush back and forth from one to the other? No. KMIR, which must be the poshest television station in the country, is located in the hotel.

Conte, a Broadway, TV and radio star who had called it a career as a performer, had long wanted to get into the broadcasting and production side of show business. To complement the station, he installed a full range of videotape and film processing equipment, and hired, as his assistant, former Jack Benny side-kick Don Wilson. Conte—surrounded by lush displays of hibiscus, roses and bougainvillea—hopes KMIR and its production facility will eventually grow into a major film and video-tape operation. In the meantime, KMIR staffers enjoy the world's most relaxed business lunches—right at the edge of that nice, cool swimming pool. END

Superchild meets his public

Marc Copage, 7, realizes that something is happening to him, but he doesn't know exactly what

By Dwight Whitney

The first thing John Copage did on that chilly spring afternoon when he picked up Marc from the Horace Mann Elementary School in Beverly Hills was lean over the back seat of the blue Mustang and comb his son's hair.

Young Marc—7 in June—was bemused as a child will be by adults with an acute case of Overfuss. He started to brush his father off almost instinctively, then dutifully allowed it to happen. He is used to this hair-combing stuff. He is an actor.

His father, a small, wiry, somewhat tense man in a dark silk suit and white dress shirt with a frayed collar, inspects the swelling where Marc has put a tooth through his lip falling off his skateboard a few days earlier. His little classmates crowd around the Mustang. "Mr. Copage, Mr. Copage, can Marc come to my birthday party? . . . He can! Aw, gee . . ."

His little classmates are white—Marc is the only black child in the first grade at Horace Mann ("Horse Mann," he calls it). Two little girls lean out the window of a gray Cadillac. "Marc, Marc! Hi, Marc!" They wave and dissolve in giggles. Marc smiles and says, "Dad, you know that boy who invited me to his birthday party? He's 8!"

On the drive to the park, people stop and stare and nudge each other at stoplights. They know who this young personage is—"Corey Baker," Diahann Carroll's "son" in TV's big success of this season, Julia. Already he is a curiosity. Their lips form, "That's him!" Marc smiles shyly and tries to look at his new book, "The Cat in the Hat Comes Back," which as yet he cannot read. There is a constant fidgeting, a constant movement. There is, too, a constant awareness that something special is expected. He's not quite sure what.

Most kids go to the park to play. This is a little different. A still photographer and his assistants, with several studio overseers and some gawkers, are over by the swings setting up camera equipment. A Fox press agent, a woman, hovers uneasily, wondering when Miss Carroll will show up. Miss Carroll has to be in the picture too. So there will be some waiting.

John Copage starts to clean Marc's fingernails with a penknife.

"Let's go in. Let's get out of the car," says Marc impatiently.

"In a minute," says John. "Now, Marc, tell the man about—"

"I'm hungry."

"Bet you didn't eat your lunch again." John clicks his tongue and unscrews the cap of a wide-mouthed thermos. "No, you didn't. Here."

Marc eyes the contents distastefully. "I should have eaten it at school. It's cold."

"Tell about your little friend Michael on the set," John starts again.

"I can't while I'm eating," says Marc sharply.

"Oh, all right. We play spy. And we're secret spies so we hide a lot. . . . Can we go now?"

"In a minute. Your hair is messy."

Jackie Coogan was 4 when he made "The Kid." Jackie Cooper started in Our Gang comedies in the Twenties, hit the big time in "Skippy" when he was 8, and two years later made Hollywood history as the only Academy Award nominee ever to go to sleep (in Marie Dressler's lap) at the banquet. Marc Copage had already finished shooting an entire season of Julia before he was 7.

Coogan's parents spent all the money. Cooper grew up to keep some of his. Young Copage, even though his baby face is familiar to millions, does not have that problem yet. There is not that much money to keep. Coming as he did, directly from kindergarten, with not even a Christmas-pageant angel on his list of credits, he was paid a modest $450 a week his first season, to be upped to $600 next. The Jackie's were Big Movie Stars; Marc is more TV Superchild. Still this superchild may turn out to be luckier than either of the other two. The law now says part of the money must be put away in trust.

Unlike his predecessors, Marc does not act. He responds. His director, a former child star himself, depends more on his "great talent for mimicry." There is not time in TV for anything else. "You gotta like kids, establish a relationship," says Ezra (Henry Aldrich) Stone. "You don't stand up so they're looking in your belly button. →

They like to see your eyes. You carry candy and invent games to play with them. You try to exert a certain influence and discipline, but you never admonish publicly. What you have is a funny game of Let's Pretend. . . ."

At the Jungle Gym in the park, Beverly Hills nannies nod and do polite takes and little kids on trikes look up to see what the commotion is about.

"Come on, Dad, you climb up, too," Marc says.

"Later," replies John sternly, looking around to see if Miss Carroll is there yet.

"What would you do if I fell down?" "Pick you up, I guess."

"One—two—three!" Marc leans out over the Jungle Gym and flops onto the sand. "Whee. It tickles my tummy and makes me scared." John automatically starts to wipe off the sand, but Marc is down in it again, hands buried up to the wrists. "Dad, what's sand made of?"

"That's a hard question. Come on." "What's your head made of?"

"Oh, bone, blood vessels, tissue. . . . Get up, Marc."

"Can't. Hands are stuck."

He tugs away as if they were encased in cement. His father gets down beside him and solemnly starts to dig the sand away. Marc pulls hard. "Pop!" he yells, imitating a cork from a bottle.

Superchild's "stage mother" is a father. It is he who accompanies Marc to the set. He didn't plan it that way.

John Copage (pronounced co-pahj), a man in his late 30's, is a musician-turned-sometime-actor from Chicago's South Side. In his teens he made good money playing sax, clarinet and "a little piano" in the clubs and combos. In 1950 he tried the Richard B. Harrison Players, a group which specialized in religious drama in Chicago churches. A year or so later he met and married Marc's mother, an actress who also danced and played the cello. The Copages moved to Los Angeles in 1952 because John "never did like Chicago," and shortly thereafter produced their first son, Eric, now 14, a talented boy whose specialty is the drums.

John was an actor who didn't act much. When acting was slow he sold real estate and insurance and made "investments." Shortly after Marc's birth in 1962 the Copages separated. A two-year custody battle ensued in which John, who describes himself as "a self-improvement man," planned the tactics, he says, by studying law books. In 1964 he won the fight.

Copage established what he likes to refer to as "our all-male household" in an old Spanish house in a partially integrated district south of Hollywood. He had a girl who came in to do some cooking, but she got married. Now John cooks. One day he heard through his agent that Fox was looking for a child to play Corey Baker. Marc beat out four others for the part.

It changed life a lot.

"Women come up and grab him. They can't help it," John explains. "'Oh, can I kiss him?' they say. Yesterday we went to pick up his brother at John Burroughs, and 150 high school kids came out and surrounded Marc—to say hello, to shake his hand, to speak. When I go to the market, I leave Marc in the car. Else I have a whole mob trailing after."

John bought a new house in Beverly Hills so that the boys could go to Beverly Hills schools. That was months ago. He hasn't even started to move in. John says he is not a permissive parent. "Of course, I don't believe in dominating. But at the same time you have to let them know you're there. If I really want Marc to do something, I tell him he won't be on the show any more. Marc is quite opinionated. He knows what he wants. He cries a lot. . . ."

In the park, Miss Carroll has arrived with her press agent in tow.

There is a lot of hugging and kissing and touching. Marc takes her hand and they go to the swings, where the photographer has set up for the picture.

The photographer wants them talking. Marc can't think what to talk about. "Why don't you tell me how you split your lip?" Diahann suggests.

"But I told you that story," says Marc irritably. She squeezes his arm. "I know," says Marc brightening. "I'll tell you about my new school!"

Presently the picture-taking is over. Marc instinctively flops in the comforting sand. Diahann sits on a park bench. "It is hard," she muses. "He is not a professional child. And making friends with his new 'family' was not easy for him. He found it hard to kiss and hug someone who was not his mother, and it took a while before this intimacy could happen. He had to learn to trust. . . . It was hard for us grown-ups, too. He is sensitive to adult fakery, and is constantly testing. You better mean it when you tell him you love him, because his instincts are sharp and your fakery may be exposed. I see it happen every day."

Some things never change.

A few weeks ago Marc Copage, Superchild and sand fancier, was taken to a private club in Los Angeles to participate in ceremonies attendant to Julia's producer, Hal Kanter, receiving an award from a group of black businessmen and attorneys. When things were late getting started, this small boy—like all small boys—had to go to the bathroom. Miss Carroll's press agent, David Horowitz, guided Marc to the Men's Room and headed him toward the most convenient stall.

From his immediate right came a voice. "Hey, aren't you that kid from the TV show?" it said excitedly. "Can I have your autograph?" Marc's face fell. He turned and cast imploring eyes at Horowitz. "Can I finish?" the little voice said.

'Hee Haw' May Have Last Laugh

On one score CBS was reluctant to scuttle the Smothers Brothers: they had given Bonanza a better run for its ratings than a procession of earlier CBS Sunday night entries. It was with "a hope and a prayer," as chief programmer Mike Dann put it, that the network decided to pit Leslie Uggams against NBC's giant killer next fall. Now, to CBS's consternation—and all but disbelief—a summer fill-in show seems to have turned the trick. A hayseed version of Laugh-In called Hee Haw bowed on June 15 to critics' groans ("ghastly," The New York Times intoned) and a walloping 19.8 National Arbitron rating—to Bonanza's 15.7. CBS's unwanted dilemma: If Hee Haw is a hit, how do you throw it off come September?

NBC, along with the other networks, has trumpeted most of its programming for next season, but hasn't said a word about one of its biggest upcoming splurges. A 2½-hour prime-time reprise of the momentous 1960's is being readied for showing as the decade closes late this year. It will be the first blockbuster of this sort since NBC's evening-long White Papers of a few years ago. All of the network's top commentators will participate in the assessment of where the world and the country went in the Sixties.

Are the Emmys really in deep trouble this time? Could be. Beefs every year over who got awards and who didn't have become as inevitable as Thanksgiving turkey, but this month's land-office dispensing of the gilded mantel-pieces apparently left some broadcasters asking, "Who needs it?" One network president, NBC's Julian Goodman, reportedly called for a re-examination by his network of its participation. CBS fared better than its rivals in the latest Emmy round, but even there an official confided, "Some of us call them the Enemies." A pull-out by one or more networks would be disastrous to the TV Academy. A $250,000 fee from the network carrying the Emmy telecast—next year will be ABC's turn—is the Academy's main meal ticket.

Dick Cavett's three-a-week summer show on ABC has run afoul of Philadelphia school officials. Cavett's producer, Tony Converse, had booked for showing on the program last week excerpts of a documentary film, "High School," which was shot in its entirety at Philadelphia's predominantly white, middle-class Northeast High School. Newsweek called it a "terrifying, inestimably important film" depicting American youth "in a gigantic garbage-disposal unit." Philadelphia school officials, getting wind of ABC's plans, threatened an injunction to block the telecast. The Philadelphians, calling the film "degrading, untrue and insulting," claimed "absolute property rights" to it and Converse, unable to reach Frederick Wiseman, who produced the film and was reported off on a fishing trip, called off the airing. Converse said he will show it if he can get clearance.

TV GUIDE / 235 Montgomery St., Suite
1620/San Francisco, Cal. 94104/981-1820

On July 1, some 500 million television viewers around the world will watch the Investiture of the Prince of Wales—the formal conferring of that title on Prince Charles. The event promises to be the most glittering bit of royal pageantry since the Coronation of Queen Elizabeth II.

The ritual of royal ceremony will get under way with two processions, which will bring first Charles and then the Queen to Caernarvon Castle on the coast of tiny Wales. Prince Charles will arrive in uniform as Colonel of the Royal Welsh Regiment, and he will be conducted to the Chamberlain's Tower to await the Queen's summons. The Queen, with the Duke of Edinburgh and her suite, will arrive at the castle's Water Gate, where an equerry will demand entrance in the name of Her Majesty. The Constable of the Castle—the Earl of Snowdon, the Queen's brother-in-law—will emerge and offer the Queen a great iron key on an oaken tray. When the Queen has touched and returned the key, signifying that she is satisfied with the Constable's stewardship of her fortress, she will proceed to the foot of the Eagle Tower and then to the central throne.

After Charles is summoned to the Queen, he will bow and kneel before her as the letters patent conveying the titles of Prince of Wales and Earl of Chester are read in English and Welsh. During the reading, the Queen will bestow upon Charles the insignia of his rank.

Charles then places his hands, in the feudal mode, between those of the Queen and swears: "I, Charles, Prince of Wales, do become your liege man of life and limb and earthly worship, and faith and truth I will bear unto you to live and die against all manner of folks." Finally, the Prince will emerge

'I, Charles, Prince of Wales...'

Millions will see an ancient title formally bestowed in a memorable ceremony

from a gate high up in the castle and be presented to the crowd waiting in the square below.

This royal tableau will be telecast here Tuesday morning, July 1. The three networks will carry the lengthy ceremonies live via satellite.

In Britain, the planning of the event has been D-Day-like in its proportions. There is a 30-page script for the Investiture Ceremony itself. A committee of clergy has worked out the religious side of the spectacle. Eight officers, 148 men and 170 horses from the Household Cavalry will be coming north by train from London at a cost of close to $40,000. More than 750 reporters, television, radio and newsreel technicians and photographers will be capturing the event for audiences around the world. In London's Buckingham Palace, retinues of servants have been acting as stand-ins for the Queen and her party, rehearsing the event for weeks.

Surprisingly, in tidy, orderly Great Britain, there's a good deal of controversy about the ceremony. Some Welsh say it's a shining feather in the nation's cap; others regard it as an insult to the proud country's heritage. Opponents ask, why should Wales celebrate an event in history which meant the end of its life as an independent country? They point out that the ceremony is not really traditional, but is based on several older rituals. And they complain that $500,000 is being spent on a pageant when much of the countryside needs better housing, improved schools, more roads, electric power and other facilities.

Many Welsh, of course, do support the event. The Mayor of Caernarvon sees the ceremony as "a wonderful bargain" which will bring permanent tourism benefits to the community. "I look at it this way," Mayor I. Bowen Griffith says, "we in Caernarvon and Wales are getting a son-in-law, and you wouldn't invite a new son-in-law to a dirty, shoddy household." So he supports the massive cleanup that is under way.

Although Charles will be the 21st Prince of Wales, the event has been formally staged in Wales only once before—in 1911, when the present Duke of Windsor was forced to don what he called "this preposterous rig" and march through the ceremony. He recalls going through the processional, held during a torrid period, "half fainting with heat and nervous excitement." His mother forced him into it, and in his memoirs he recalls, "I got the impression that if I did what was asked of me, it would help Papa in his dealings with the difficult Mr. Lloyd George." (Lloyd George, then Chancellor of the Exchequer and Prime Minister of Britain during World War I, was the Constable of Caernarvon Castle and the most fervent of Welsh patriots.)

Charles, the center of all of this current activity, has been at the University College of Wales, taking a cram course, studying the Welsh language and Welsh history. After the Investiture at Caernarvon, he will return to Cambridge University, where he has just finished his second year.

Young Charles recently broke 20 years of virtual public silence on himself in a remarkably candid radio interview. He emerged as an articulate, amusing, opinionated young man—very much in the mold of his father, Prince Philip—with an engaging eagerness to put his point of view on the record.

Prince Charles admits he's somewhat worried about the Investiture. He explains, "It would be unnatural, I think, if one didn't feel any apprehension about it. But I think if one takes it as it comes, it will be much easier. I don't blame people demonstrating. They've never seen me before; they don't know what I'm like. I have hardly been to Wales, and you can't really expect people to be overzealous about having a so-called English Prince to come amongst them."

It will be after the Investiture is over that Charles will know who his real friends in Wales are. And it is also then that he will begin the harder job of earning the respect and affection of the Welsh. Says one Welshman, "If he's coming here for the title, I want nothing to do with it. But if he's coming for the job, that's fine. Wales desperately needs an ambassador. If Charles can do for Wales what his father's done so well for England, he'll be a hero after all."

Fahrenheit 451

Mickey One

Banning

CinderFella

Boys' Night Out

Marco the Magnificent

Sometimes there's much to be said for the rerun season and I suspect that this week's rerun of "Mickey One" says it all. To have another go at this Arthur Penn film that is fast becoming the favorite of campus film societies is almost—repeat almost—worth the joys of a third-go-round of "CinderFella" or a fourth run of "Boys' Night Out."

"Mickey One," the 1965 film that signaled the Penn-Warren Beatty partnership that went on to "Bonnie and Clyde," is a frankly avant-garde film that becomes increasingly topical through the years. Its surface story of a night-club comic on the run from the syndicate that owns him is a basic parable of modern man on the run from the nameless fears and faceless terrors of his time. Beyond Beatty's brilliant portrait of the small-time entertainer, there are superb performances by Hurd Hatfield, Alexandra Stewart, Teddy Hart and Franchoy Tone and, of course, Penn's artistry in using both sharp realism and subtle symbolism in exploring a new narrative form that sparkles with cinematic excitement.

"Fahrenheit 451," Francois Truffaut's 1966 film version of Ray Bradbury's 1953 view of an Orwellian world of robots, has the cachet of an "art" film but is neither science nor fiction nor good red-blooded movie. It's pre-tentious, loaded with heavy-handed ironies that stress its simple-mindedness and not even the presence of Oskar Werner or Julie Christie lends it substance to match or even approach its dazzling Technicolor.

All else is equally banal. "Banning" provides a peek at Dullsville, posh country-club style, with Robert Wagner as a golf pro all tied up with gals and gambling and a Nowheresville storyline. The storyline is, to say the most, classic in "CinderFella" (heavens, is it getting to be an annual event?), which presents Jerry Lewis at the height of his 1960 the-producer-gets-all-the-lines producing career. It's a boy version of the fairy tale, with Lewis cavorting like no boy should.

At least the fantasy is clear from the start with "Boys' Night Out," which is certainly getting a run for somebody's money. Start out with Kim Novak as a sociologist working for her Ph.D.—and baby, its fantasy-land for real, even without all those stale 1962 tickle-and-tease sex episodes clogging up the screen. This is the sort of vulgarity that ought to be retired rather than rerun. But let's admit that it serves an if-only-by-contrast purpose, because if only by contrast "Marco the Magnificent" emerges as harmless kiddy-level stuff—for kiddies who don't mind badly dubbed cheesy spectaculars. With Horst Buchholz struggling to radiate instant seduction in the title role, Polo's epic journey to China in the 13th century is reduced to a vaudeville show—and we know what happened to vaudeville.

In some areas network movies may not be seen on the days indicated.

Forecast of a tranquilized society that forbids reading and burns books . . . French director Francois Truffaut ("Stolen Kisses") adapted this 1966 English film from Ray Bradbury's science-fiction novel.

The protagonist is Montag, an unquestioning member of a book-burning squad, until a meeting with a dedicated teacher gives him an insatiable—and dangerous—thirst for knowledge.

Divided on the film's philosophical merits, critics cited its technical craftsmanship, particularly Nicolas Roeg's eloquent cinematography.

DRAMA SPECIAL (C) 11:00 13

THE STRANGE CASE OF DR. JEKYLL AND MR. HYDE

Special: Jack Palance stars in the dual role of Jekyll and Hyde, immortalized in Robert Louis Stevenson's horror classic.

The setting is 19th-century London, where Dr. Jekyll, an intellectual experimenter, tests his theories about good and evil in man by transforming himself into the brutal Mr. Hyde.

Other characters . . . Devlin (Denholm Elliott), Jekyll's attorney and friend; Gwyn (Billie Whitelaw), the ingenue; the chemist Stryker (Oscar Homolka); Tessie (Tessie O'Shea), the pub-owner; Lanyon (Leo Genn), who opposes Jekyll's work; the butler Poole (Gillie Fenwick); Grimes (Duncan Lamont), of Scotland Yard; Sir John Turnbull (Torin Thatcher), who thinks Jekyll is a quack.

Oscar winner Ian McLellan Hunter wrote the TV adaptation, which won a Mystery Writers Edgar Allan Poe Award. Veteran make-up artist Dick Smith created the diabolical face of Mr. Hyde. England's Charles Jarrott directed in Canada, where art director Trevor Williams re-created London's Soho district in a section of downtown Toronto. Produced by Dan Curtis, whose forte is tales of mystery (he calls his "Dark Shadows" daytime series "a supernatural Gothic serial"). (Rerun; 2 hrs., 30 min.)

THE WILD CELL

Every two minutes someone in the U.S. dies of cancer. But, as the 21st century is on the way in, scientists can now offer hope that cancer is on the way out.

Cancer is a disease of the cells—the body's basic structure—thus it can attack any part of the body. There are some 300 types of cancer, and most drugs strong enough to kill cancerous cells also kill healthy ones.

Films, stills, animation and interviews provide a survey of the ways scientists are attacking this staggering problem.

The report traces efforts to learn more about cancers caused by a virus. With monkeys as man's stand-ins, exhaustive tests are aimed at pinpointing a virus as the cause of leukemia. If the virus can be isolated, a vaccine can be produced.

Radiation provides another approach, as in helping to detect brain cancer. Films show how cancerous cells collect concentrations of radioactive isotope and are spotted by a special camera.

Also covered: carcinogens (found in exhaust fumes, tobacco smoke and polluted air), which are "triggers" that can induce cancer; and an animated sequence showing the wild, destructive growth of cancer cells. Walter Cronkite reports. (Rerun) economics advisor to President Nixon. Possible topics: the 10 percent tax surcharge; wage and price controls to curb inflation; and an increase in the prime interest rate. Newsmen: Bill Lawrence and Louis Rukeyser.

MEMPHIS BIRTHDAY BLUES FESTIVAL

It was sweltering in Memphis on the weekned of June 6-8, when hundreds of music enthusiasts (mostly college-aged) gathered at the Overton Park shell. The attraction: the fourth annual Memphis Blues Festival, with sounds ranging from the early blues of the Twenties and Thirties to blues music as it has been absorbed into current rock styles.

This year's festival was special. It celebrated the 150th birthday of Memphis, a favorite haunt of pioneer blues artists. Singer Rufus Thomas was on hand to introduce the festival's performers, including . . .

"Bukka" White, country-blues singer, who accompanies himself on a steel guitar.

Nathan Beauregard, at least 95 years old, blind; versatility on guitar includes use of pick, knife and bottleneck.

John Loudermilk, author of such classics as "A Rose and a Baby Ruth," "Big Daddy," "Abilene" and "Tobacco Road."

Moloch, driving new Memphis rock group.

The Insect Trust, described by their manager as "the world's first country-jazz-folk-blues-rock-swing band."

Steve Allen is the host. (2 hrs.)

BOOK-DIVIDENDS: A library-building plan every reading family should know about

THE EXPERIMENTAL MEMBERSHIP suggested there will not only prove, by your own actual experience, how effectually membership in the Book-of-the-Month Club can keep you from missing, through oversight or overbusyness, books you fully intend to read; it will also demonstrate another important advantage enjoyed by members: Book-Dividends. Through this unique profit-sharing system Book-of-the-Month Club members can regularly receive valuable library volumes—at a small fraction of their retail prices—simply by buying books they would buy even if they were not members.

If you continue after this experimental membership, you will earn, for every Club Selection or Alternate you buy, a Book-Dividend Credit. Each Credit, upon payment of a nominal sum, often only $1.00 or $1.50—somewhat more for unusually expensive volumes or sets—will entitle you to a Book-Dividend which you may choose from over a hundred fine library volumes now available.

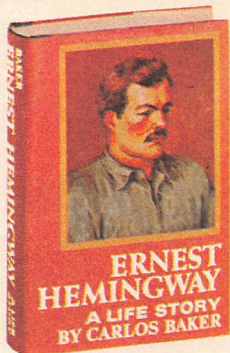

This is probably the most economical means ever devised for building a well-rounded personal library. Since its inauguration, over $465,000,000 worth of books (retail value) has been earned and received by Book-of-the-Month Club members through this unique plan.

THE WARREN YEARS

Earl Warren, U.S. Chief Justice for the past 16 years, retired this month. His years in the Supreme Court and the Court's tremendous effect on the changing face of American society are the subjects of this documentary.

Films, stills and interviews—including one with Mr. Warren—combine to cover four areas . . .

The record of the Warren Court, with special emphasis on civil rights, reapportionment and criminal procedure. Among those interviewed are Senate Minority Leader Everett M. Dirksen and former U.S. Attorney General Ramsey Clark.

The role of the Court: did it overstep its bounds as the judicial branch of Government? A panel of legal scholars, lawyers and judges evaluates the record.

The men of the Warren Court: how the associate justices were influenced by the Chief Justice.

A biographical look at Earl Warren, including his years as California prosecutor, attorney general and governor.

Others interviewed include former Associate Justice Arthur Goldberg, California judge Earl Warren Jr. and several Warren law clerks. Produced by Jim Karayn. (90 min.)

6 NET PLAYHOUSE—Drama
 "A Song of Summer" dramatizes 10 years of relentless creativity, and a collaboration unique in musical history. Rendered helpless by paralysis and blindness 10 years before his death, English composer Frederick Delius found a new link to music through the devotion of the admiring Eric Fenby (with whose help Delius continued to execute compositions of extraordinary emotional intensity). Produced by award-winning documentarian Ken Russell. Delius: Max Adrian. Fenby: Christopher Gable. Jelka Delius: Maureen Pryor. Percy Grainger: David Collings. (90 min.)

[Following the play, "People of the Road," a film without dialog capturing the many moods of a circus.]

PRINCE OF WALES C

Special: The Investiture of the 21st Prince of Wales—20-year-old Prince Charles, heir to the British throne—is telecast via satellite from Caernarvon Castle in Wales.

The formal Investiture ceremonies will be covered by all networks through the facilities of the BBC. Reporting for the BBC are Welsh actor Emyln Williams, and correspondents Richard Baker and Cliff Michelmore.

Since 1301, following King Edward I's conquest of Wales, the titles Prince of Wales and Earl of Chester have been customarily bestowed upon the heir apparent. This year, the Investiture has not been without some controversy. For this story and a description of the ceremonies, see the article on page A-2.

Approximate time guide to the day's events . . .

First 90 min.: processions bringing to the castle representatives of various strata of Welsh society; 21-gun salute. (At press time, ABC planned to forgo coverage of these events.)

Following half-hour: Prince Charles arrives; Queen Elizabeth II arrives and is welcomed to the castle; the Queen and members of the Royal Family are conducted to the dais.

Third hour to conclusion: the ceremonies, including a loyal address from the people of Wales and the Prince's reply, both read in English and Welsh; a religious service; and the presentation of the Prince of Wales (by the Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh) to the assembled citizenry at three sites within the castle. (ABC may return to regular programming before the conclusion of the ceremonies.)

Now Possible To Shrink Hemorrhoids Stop Itching and Relieve Pain IN MOST CASES.

Science has found a medication with the ability, in most cases—to stop burning itch, relieve pain and actually shrink hemorrhoids. Tests by doctors proved in case after case, while gently relieving pain and itching, actual reduction (shrinkage) took place.

The answer is Preparation H®. There is no other formula like it for the treatment of hemorrhoids. Preparation H also soothes inflamed, irritated tissues and helps prevent further infection. In ointment or suppository form.

7 SUMMER FOCUS C

Special: "It Can Be Done." A series of progress reports on U.S. race relations begins with a visit to Atlanta, a city trying to rise from racial turmoil. Cameras roam Atlanta as newsman Mal Goode talks with blacks and whites to gauge the city's success. Leaders of the white community are proud of Atlanta's progress, citing black recruitment into business and predicting a black mayor in the future; policemen spend time working with ghetto dwellers. The black community is more skeptical: although old-timers cherish their increasing political power, reality to many blacks is slums, unemployment and less money for poverty programs. Interviewed: Mayor Ivan Allen Jr. and State Representative Julian Bond. Anchor man: Frank Reynolds. (60 min.)

[Pre-empted regular programming.]

Stations reserve the right to make last-minute changes.

Are you using too many tampons?

Put it this way: Do you have to change more than you'd like to?

Make more trips to the Powder Room than you'd care to? Excuse yourself more than you need to?

Try MEDS TAMPONS. MEDS are so absorbent you'll probably need fewer of them.

MEDS are made differently. That's why. They're made with soft, absorbent rayon.

First, there's a gentle rayon cover. Then a layer of rayon fibers that absorb quickly. Then another layer of fine rayon storage fibers that absorb steadily. And, in the center, a cushioned layer that holds, and holds some more.

Can you imagine? Some tampons are just chunks of cotton. No wonder you probably need more of them.

This month try MEDS. They come in regular or super, with a soft polyethylene applicator.

See how much better fewer tampons can be.

You can say that again!

The truth about 5% Passbook Accounts.

The truth is our 5% is better than our 4%. By 1%. And that's all.

For some people that's plenty.

True, Wells Fargo gives you a five-year guarantee on that 5% interest rate. Most banks don't.

But aside from the obvious advantage, there are some disadvantages in having a 5% Passbook Account.

You can make your withdrawal only at the end of a quarter. Or after giving us 90 days notice.

For people who make long term investments that's no trouble. But for others it might spoil some spur of the moment plans.

True, Wells Fargo does let you start your quarter any month you choose. Other banks go strictly by a calendar-year quarter.

All banks require a minimum deposit of $500 to open a 5% Passbook Account. And deposits of $100 or more.

So it's true. A Wells Fargo 5% Passbook Account gives you one big extra. 1% to be exact.

But a Wells Fargo 4% Passbook Savings Account also offers one big thing. Your money can come and go as you please.

There just may be more to saving money than interest. Maybe.

WHERE THE ISRAELIS COMPETE WITH THE ARABS PEACEFULLY

After years of watching the programs of neighboring nations, Israel settles down to see its own shows

By Anthony P. Hatch

On Dec. 28, 1968, thousands of Jerusalem's Israelis were engrossed in the Middle East version of The Late Show. Today they remember little about it except that it was 1) old, 2) an adventure yarn and 3) interrupted by a bulletin, which began:

Israeli commandos are attacking Beirut International Airport.

It was startling news, especially because it did not come from Israel. What the viewers had heard was an Arabic bulletin, broadcast from Beirut by Lebanon Television.

Israelis watching an Arab station? Not surprising—Israel had no TV until last spring. But, long before, thousands had bought sets and become regular fans of Abbott and Costello (from Amman, Jordan), The Saint (from Beirut) and other hoary reruns. Israel, bombarded for years by Arab TV, was the last nation to introduce TV in that area.

Intellectuals, religious leaders, politicians and even government figures like David Ben-Gurion had long fought against TV. Some opponents contended that television would debase the nation's culture and disturb living patterns; others pointed out that Israel's struggling economy—which still depends on a six-day work week—could ill afford the luxury. When TV finally was born in Israel, it was born of necessity and in difficult times.

The turning point was the Six Day War of 1967. Even before the fighting started, government officials had noted that some 20,000 sets nightly were tuned to whatever Arab stations could be picked up. (Some viewers said that on "good nights" they could even get Cairo.) The language barrier didn't amount to much—many Israelis understand Arabic, and others could read the English subtitles.

The swift Israeli victory provided the strongest argument in favor of television. TV would be the most effective weapon against the propaganda aimed at the 1,000,000 Arabs living → in occupied territories.

The Knesset (parliament) scrapped its prewar target date of 1969 and decided to get Israel's television service on the air by May 1968.

It did, on May 2, kicking off with perhaps the most ambitious live special ever attempted by a fledgling TV operation: a remote truck, carrying a crew of technicians recruited from various countries, televised army units rolling through Jerusalem to mark Israel's 20th anniversary.

The inaugural telecast was short-lived. Two hours after it began, Israel Television left the air and plunged into the nightmarish task of training 250 home-grown staff members who would eventually bring the station back on the air on a regular schedule.

The man in charge of the birth of Israel Television was a 42-year-old professor of mass communications, Elihu Katz. From the beginning, the Brooklyn-born scholar did not share the feeling that TV might debase Israel's cultural level, although he predicted "it might change emphasis." He pointed out that in a survey conducted after the '67 war a large proportion of Israelis interviewed had definite opinions about what to do with the occupied territories but only a hazy impression of where these places were on a map. "TV," he said, "is ideally suited to such jobs of popular education."

One ambitious example of education proved to be the high point of the first six months of operation. It was a live telecast of the traditional midnight Christmas Mass from the Church of the Nativity in Bethlehem. For the first time in the Holy Land, Jews who had never seen the service, together with their Christian countrymen, could witness the colorful ceremony, broadcast nation-wide. Church officials—who had warned in advance that any disruption of the Mass would mean the end of TV coverage in future years—were overwhelmingly pleased with the results.

As Israel TV's first anniversary arrived this May, viewers were receiving 12 hours of programming a week—three nights of four hours each. Arabic-language news-and-entertainment features predominate, although Hebrew-language productions are plentiful. Despite manpower limitations and facilities shortages, the 12-hour weekly schedule includes a surprisingly large proportion of locally produced programs, from documentaries to quiz shows, to go along with such old American favorites as The Defenders and You Are There. The hope is to expand to a seven-day schedule eventually.

The public response to Israel TV has been overwhelming. TV sets, which cost the average man a month's salary, or more, have been selling at the rate of one thousand a month, according to one local manufacturer. "We can't produce enough sets," another said.

Among local programs, the popular favorites seem to be news broadcasts. They are produced by two news sections, each serving a different language and each staffed with its own complement of writers, reporters and producers.

One of the most popular programs is a 30-minute Hebrew-language show called Mabat (Look), which appears every broadcasting night. And Mabat's Arabic counterpart has conferred stardom on an attractive 28-year-old blonde announcer, Gloria Stewart. A few years ago, the shy, soft-spoken Miss Stewart was working as a secretary for Kuwait Airways and living with her Scottish-Italian parents in Jericho. Now she has her own apartment in Jerusalem, receives fan mail ("Until I see you at night, I just can't sleep") and appears professionally with an Arabic first name, Majeda.

There have been, predictably, a number of objections to the new television service. Some people have criticized the 20th-century antennas, which look out of place above the ancient ramparts and walls of the Old City. Israeli theater owners have complained that television is killing movie attendance. Politicians, with an eye on the coming general elections this year, are apprehensive about the role the electronic medium may play in pioneering. And religious leaders of some communities have publicly damned the "TV box" as nothing less than an evil machine.

Despite the arguments, most Israelis agree that TV is here to stay, without commercials, they hope (as yet there are none).

As for those who toil inside Television House, last year's helpless feeling of confusion has been replaced by the organized frenzy typical of older, established stations. Everyone admits, however, that there is still much to be learned, sometimes the hard way.

There is the lighting man, for instance, who still blushes when reminded of an incident months ago. After a news program, one evening, he put on his coat and left, thinking that the day's broadcast schedule was over. He was halfway out the door when he realized that he had forgotten to turn out the studio lights. He rushed into the master control room and pulled an unmarked switch. The lights went out, all right, but so did the whole station—which had still been on the air. The switch, he discovered, controlled the power to the main transmitter.

Despite such occasional blunders, Israel TV has won so many friends—in government, at any rate—that in February the Israeli cabinet approved a new operating budget of 20 million pounds. It's enough to ensure that the station's distinctive symbol, the Menorah (sacred candelabrum), will appear on home screens for some time to come.

A medically sound treatment for most painful hemorrhoids

First, stop the pain. And the itching. Nupercainal® is a unique combination of lubricants plus the most effective topical pain reliever available without a prescription. It relieves pain and itching fast. Provides much longer lasting relief. Nupercainal also soothes inflamed tissue—in turn helps the natural healing process. Moreover Nupercainal facilitates natural movements.

Next, doctors recommend, use common sense. Stay off spicy, highly seasoned foods. Avoid constipation and what causes it. Such as lack of rest and bad eating habits. Stay regular. Sitz baths aid comfort and natural healing.

Above all, use caution. Nupercainal brings relief in most cases and for most types of hemorrhoids. But if symptoms are severe, persistent, frequently recurrent...if there is rectal bleeding...do see your doctor.

Joyce Van Patten

By Leslie Raddatz

A fast talker is what you would call Joyce Van Patten who plays the wife Claudia Gramus in CBS's The Good Guys not that she talks about herself all the time like so many actresses, no she talks about everybody from Mae West to Whitney Blake and says she has very definite opinions on all sorts of things except suddenly she can't think of anything she has definite opinions on except that she was very good in the movie "I Love You, Alice B. Toklas" and she disapproves of anybody over 30 who wears long hair and love beads ("It's so false—peopleshouldhavetheirown-individuality"). . . .

Not that she wouldn't have plenty to talk about if she did talk about herself. After all she has been in show business all her life (she's 33 but says her husband actor-singer Hal Lynch says that she shouldn't go around telling everybody) she was a model at 8 months and made her →

Broadway debut at age 5 in "Love's Old Sweet Song" starring Walter Huston she and her older brother Dick were known as The Van Patten Kids but they were never a team like the Gumm Sisters (you know, Judy Garland) but their mother always had pictures of both of them on the composites she sent around to the casting people. Joyce saw her brother in the recent movie "Charly" and didn't even recognize him until halfway through the picture which shows you what can happen when families drift apart. . . .

In 1943 she got the Donaldson Award for her performance in "Tomorrow the World," the play starring Ralph Bellamy and Shirley Booth. Joyce wasn't in the movie she got out of the theater completely when she was in her teens ("My early life is just a blur. By the time I got to my teens, I had problems. I wasn't cute any more and got married at 16 and had a baby and that sort of thing"). She never even finished high school she always went to professional school for kid actors where a girl who had a part and got excused would phone in and pretend she was somebody that had a job for Joyce so that Joyce would be excused too. . . .

After her first marriage ("I have no recollection of it at all") she went to work doing things like folding ties and selling insurance. Then she gradually began working her way back into the theater again ("After all it was the only thing I really knew so I went back on my own—without a mother pushing") her first adult role was in "Desk Set" with Shirley Booth and she did other plays and a couple of movies produced in New York "14 Hours" and "The Goddess." She also got married again ("That was my movie-star marriage to Martin Balsam—it's kind of a blank") she met her current husband Hal Lynch when they both worked in "Spoon River Anthology" if you saw it on TV you know that the actors just sit there then get up and make their speeches and sit down again. One night just before the show Joyce ate some bad shrimp and had to leave the stage after every speech ("What if the whole cast had eaten that shrimp?"). . . .

You would never guess it to look at her now but Joyce has had a weight problem she weighed 175 pounds when she was doing the soap opera As the World Turns ("I kept getting bigger and bigger every day"). It was at a Sunset Strip night club that she got her big break doing "Third City" which was written by Paul Mazursky and Larry Tucker who later wrote The Danny Kaye Show and put her in it for three seasons and "I Love You, Alice B. Toklas" and put her in that too then came the pilot of The Good Guys. Afterwards she read that somebody at CBS wanted to replace her but Bob Denver the star of the show went to bat for her saying, "If they do this to you in April, they can do it to me in September, and I'm going to stop it right now". . . .

Although television viewers know her mostly for comedy Joyce Van Patten is most interested in the serious theater with actor Charles Aidman she formed Theater West a group of performers who get together to do serious things as opposed to the things most of them do for a living ("You have to be interested in acting when you're in a series") Whitney Blake is in Theater West but Mae West isn't. . . .

Joyce and her husband live in an old house in the Whitley Heights section of Hollywood ("Beulah Bondi lives near us") with her two children from the past two marriages the "old" boy Casey is 17 and the girl Talia is 9 ("Now I just want an English sheep dog") Joyce doesn't want her children to be actors at least not just yet ("Your childhood is your own and you should enjoy it") but her son is already interested. As for Joyce aside from acting she likes to play tennis and swim and work in the garden. . . .

ANY QUESTIONS?

REVIEW

by Cleveland Amory

Q. Why do you use the "we" style? Who is we? You and who else? Do you think you're royal?

A. We is just me. However, to me, we is more amusing than I is. We would not have laughed, for example, if Queen Victoria had said, "I am not amused."

Q. How many episodes of a series do you see before you review it?

A. At least three. Three strikes, we figure, and you're out.

Q. Do you watch more than one show at a time?

A. Not unless the Mets are playing.

Q. I think you are mellowing. Are you?

A. Nonsense. We weigh just what we weighed in college. It's just that with us writing each week, television could hardly fail to get better.

Q. Do people take your criticisms personally?

A. Some do. Monty Hall, for example, cornered us at a hockey game in Los Angeles and went through our review of Let's Make a Deal line by line. He was against it. On the other hand, Robert Stack, whom we had criticized in The Untouchables, The American Sportsman and The Name of the Game wrote us a card which we admire. "Thanks," he said, "for your continued support." Our favorite of the year, though, was a boy who called our home late at night and said, "I am 12 years old. Your review of Dark Shadows was the most close-minded review I have ever read. Letter will follow." It did, too.

Q. Which shows do you watch most regularly for your own pleasure?

A. Ironsides and Mission: Impossible.

Ironsides is our favorite because we like the relationship of Raymond Burr, Barbara Anderson, Don Mitchell and Don Galloway. The only time this show leaves us cold is when they have a guest star take over. Then it's just like any other show. As for Mission: Impossible, it's a real tour de force—without, praise be, too much force.

Q. Which shows did you most hate to see go off the air?

A. The Smothers Brothers Comedy Hour and That's Life. We believe the Brothers went off the air primarily because of an interdepartmental CBS fight between their entertainment and news departments. We admire CBS's news department, but we think entertainment shows, too, should be able to make prime-time comments. The Brothers were one-sided in their comments, it is true. The obvious answer to that, however, was not to put them off the air, but to put on another show which makes funny comments on the other side. As for That's Life, it was tragic to see it go—a sparkling, innovative, really different musical-comedy effort.

Q. Do Carson, Bishop, Griffin, Douglas, Cavett, etc., have any one thing in common?

A. They have a lot of things in common. They are all bright and quick and possess the best reactor mechanisms outside of Alamogordo, N.M. They are also, curiously, all short. Which would seem to mean that women want to mother them and men don't want to murder them. Steve Allen, on the other hand, is tall—which proves that all generalities are false, including, generally speaking, this one.

NEIL HICKEY REPORTS:

CBS will travel uptown to Harlem's Morris Park to tape one of the six summer shows of the third annual Harlem Cultural Festival. The program, produced by TONY LAWRENCE and JERROLD H. KUSHNICK, stars JAMES EARL JONES, the 5th DIMENSION, and jazz great OLATUNJI; air date is July 28 . . . On Aug. 24, ABC will try to shed light on "How It Feels to Be Black," focusing on the neglected area of the American Negro's psychological problems. Participants include two noted black psychiatrists and volunteer patients who are, or have been, in therapy.

PAMELA ILOTT, director of CBS's religious broadcasts, had an exclusive interview with Jordan's King HUSSEIN during her recent Middle East junket, which also yielded several other filmed segments for next-season airing . . . NBC's religious programming for August will cover traditional approaches as well as modern upheavals: "Faith and the Bible" is the Aug. 3 entry, which, through music, scripture and words, offers Biblical answers to troubled youth; and "Telling It Like It Is, and How It Ought to Be" is the name of Guideline's four-part conversation series, aimed at illustrating the Catholic Church's newly aroused interest in social involvement.

TV scrutinizes itself on July 13, when ABC's FRANK REYNOLDS moderates a panel discussion of "The Power of Television" . . . Producer MARTIN MANULIS is in charge of the first of next season's CBS Playhouse offerings. It will be telecast in the fall . . . DICK CAVETT's got EARTHA KITT and DAVID HEMMINGS signed up for dates in the near future . . . Actor MICHAEL CAINE will narrate NBC's hour-long color special on Sept. 7, called "The Battle of Britain." It includes footage of Nazi planes swarming over England, aerial dogfights between RAF and Luftwaffe pilots, the strafing of British radar installations and airfields, and the bombing of London.

July 8 is the date for the first 60 Minutes Anthology, a series that will highlight memorable moments from the CBS magazine show's past season . . . And NBC's First Tuesday is preparing a segment on drag racing for summer presentation. Producer TOM TOMIZAWA will film a portion of it in Dallas . . . BILL MARTIN, who's in charge of the new syndicated version of Queen for a Day, reports that it will place greater emphasis on youth and fashions (does that mean no more tears?) than its predecessor, hosted by JACK BAILEY, did.

ABC's Wide World of Sports will carry--live and in its entirety--LEW ALCINDOR's first professional basketball game on Oct. 18: ALCINDOR and other Milwaukee Bucks oppose the Detroit Pistons . . . NBC's World Series of Golf originates from the Firestone Country Club (Akron, Ohio) on Sept. 6 and 7; participants are the winners of golf's Big Four tournaments: the Masters, U.S. Open, British Open and PGA.
